BIOGRAPHY

"I attended college for a couple of years, and then moved to New York City. I loved the city and still do. Since that first move, I have lived in NYC three different times and Baltimore, MD four different times. I am presently in Baltimore and will stay here. I also lived in Santa Fe, NM for three years and Orlando, FL five years. That is a lot of moving and the nicks in my furniture prove that!

I married Joe Kurdle in NYC. He was a classically-trained musician from Juilliard, and became a jazz musician. During the early years of our marriage, we spent 4 years in the Navy at Annapolis Naval Academy. Our son, Aaron, now 45, was born there. Joe's family was from Baltimore and I am still very close to them. After that, I pursued my ambition to be a performer and did a fair amount of acting and singing on stage and with big bands. Aaron and I moved back to Baltimore when he was still in elementary school. I did tons of theater in Baltimore while raising my son and working in offices plus managing apartments. I became a fundraiser for the Baltimore Opera Company."

"Once Aaron was on his own, I moved back to NYC and was fortunate to be cast in the Broadway production of 42nd Street. I was with that production for 6 years, in NY and on the road, and then New Mexico which I loved. But, I began to miss the city - - so back East I came. I spent some time in Florida helping my son who became a single father and I helped him raise Kelsey, age 12, my beloved granddaughter."

"I am now in Baltimore and work 2 days a week for a non-profit scholarship program which is used in 3 high schools here. These kids are different than we were and I hope they realize how wonderful their high school days truly are."

"I love you all."
